Epiphany 2018

In Keble College Chapel in Oxford, there is a wonderful, and world famous, painting by Holman Hunt: Christ as 'The Light of the World'. Christian life follows in the steps of the Magi, a journeying towards the light that is Christ, so that we may worship, offer our gifts, and be encouraged through such a humbling encounter to go and make a witness in new ways.

Of intrigue and challenge are a number of important elements in the story:

- The Magi were seekers, not experts.
- They offered expressions of themselves.
- They worshipped Jesus.
- Their witness was to be in their own areas of calling.
- Their journeying towards the Light of Christ empowered each of them to go forth and shed this light further.

This spirit of Epiphany – seeking to see the Light of Christ more clearly, and then seeking to shed it abroad – is the way of the Christian life. Our focus is worship, and this call empowers us for witness – in our own particular ways.

It is in this spirit of Epiphany that I have invited a number of colleagues to share some insights into their particular journeying and the range of witness being blessed into our work as a Diocese.

I hope that all of us in leadership roles across the Diocese can use and share these Epiphany offerings to encourage others, and to invite prayerful support for further discernment and development.

Christ is the Light of the World. May we root our work together in the Diocese for 2018 in this spirit of Epiphany – for ourselves, and for all for whom we accept responsibilities in terms of seeking to provide appropriate opportunities and structures through which this Holy light can stream.

We give thanks for the work in Derbyshire's schools during this week to help our young people understand this wicked crime. We remember the millions of children who are bought and sold into slavery.
